

Weekly Wild Wednesday

For October 14th 2020

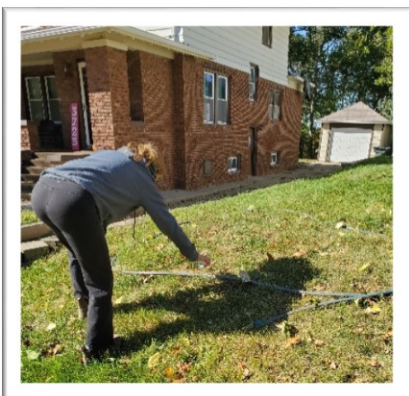

Hi everyone, what an incredible week!

I learned some -new to me- seeds from Dotty and her daughter, while harvesting Purple Prairie Clover (in the brown paper bag above) for the Veteran's Memorial Prairie site. What fun, and what perfect weather!

A bunch of aggressive Cedar trees were removed up at Yankton, and converted into edging for The Flower House. One more load should do it to edge the back yard, well, possibly two more loads! This is a puzzle piece work in progress to get 'the look'.

Also a new bed was installed on site at “The Flower House”, but this one may be removed as a “Growing Pain”--not sure about the look of this new bed. Will revisit this site several times this coming week---to feel that one out-- and tweak a bit. A rock, garden sculpture, bird bath---something needs to ‘anchor’ this overwintering patch to make it work while it kills the grass underneath and waits for the Spring Native Plant Sale. Ideas? Suggestions? A small trellis did NOT work.

Down at the Yanney Gardens, Charese’s friend put the finishing touches and the last coat of paint on the trellis for the Virginia Creeper! It looks fabulous!

Wishing and hoping for good weather on Sunday for the Seed Exchange!
