

Weekly Wild Wednesday

For January 6th, 2021

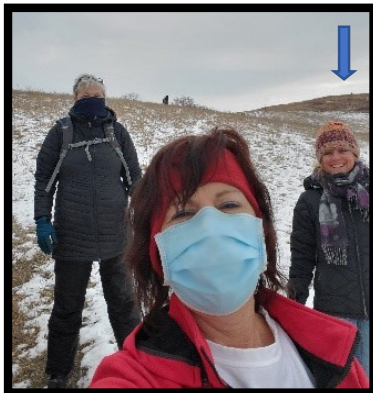

It's a NEW year! Health and Happiness Wishes are extended to one and all!

The Turkey Troop were scratching away near our driveway, and deer, bunny, and birds along with their tracks were strikingly visible this week in the snow!

There were several days of fantastic Fog Sculptures and perfect hiking weather to view them!

We saw a Red Tail Hawk on the fencepost behind us in the Sioux City Prairie.

Freezing fog produces hoar frost, rime across Iowa

At The Wild Mess In Progress-- Rolling Out:

The Lending Library! Sorting through books in rainy weather is such a pleasure! There are quite a few books to be sorted and indexed, and the 'old fashioned' pouch style write your name on the card type of check out seems the most practical, but all ideas are welcomed. If you have any 'extra' Nature books to donate, they will be welcomed!

At the Veterans Memorial Prairie, a few 'Friends of Stone Park' met to:

*Laugh,
Learn,
and do a little
Snow
Angel Seeding!*

For this process, we made our angels, and carefully raked the spot so that the Purple Prairie Clover seeds made contact with the ground.

Then we raked JUST SNOW over the seeds to start the Freeze/Thaw Cycle. Next year, we should be able to see if these seeds were successful by their growing Angel Shapes!
Citizen Science at Play!

These local seeds were carefully sourced in Millie's Prairie on Dotty and Bill Zales "Prairie Hills" property. See Link for that fun Harvesting Day!

For The Flower House, Cale did some Mason Bee research on his own, and is busy trying out designs and woods!

Go Cale!

The Yanney Gardens are sleeping, but there are plans for the coming week...

Warm and Healthy Wishes!
