

Weekly Wild Wednesday

July 9th, 2025

What a Week of "Tame Spaces and Wild Places!"

We took a trip to the Great Smoky Mountains, and it inspired thoughts as to LARGE and SMALL spaces! It's so easy to think that Nature is "Out There" and forget that Nature is EVERYWHERE! Each of us can appreciate and support Nature in EVERY space! YOUR space matters to someone! And so do the medium sized-- and MASSIVE Nature Areas! Urban, Suburban, Rural, and WILD BEYOND WORDS! EVERY space matters! Look closely at YOUR nature! Every Native plant has a story!

Kari Sandage and I completed the application for renewing the City's status as a Bird Friendly City in May 2025. Our application was accepted, and we continue as a Bird Friendly (IA) City, part of the Bird
City Network.

SPOTLIGHT: Nature Everywhere Conference Recap

This month's newsletter covers a recap of the Children & Nature Network's Nature Everywhere Conference from May 2025, including the keynote address by award-winning author Diane Wilson, author of "The Seed Keeper".

"As we say in Dakota, 'Mitakuye owas'in' — 'we are all related.' When we care for the earth, when we raise healthy children, returning to these old ways will help us transcend the trauma of the past and create a new, hopeful vision for the future," said Diane Wilson.

Wilson, along with the nearly 100 other conference speakers and presenters, helped create an inspirational and hopeful vision for the future of the children and nature movement. That hope spread throughout the over 600 attendees. Below we share recordings and session presentations.

Resilience in Action at the 2025 Nature Everywhere Conference

"Dr. Hanaa Hamdi looked out at a sea of over 600 faces. The buzz from early-morning greetings and fresh cups of coffee had faded to a charged stillness. Surveying the room, the systems scientist and Children & Nature Network board chair opened the first day of the 2025 Nature Everywhere Conference with words

The concept of Nature Everywhere is catching like Prescribed Fire! (Ha!)
